Gentlemen:

The outcome of the trial against Microsoft left me with the following feelings:

- American politics can be bought, i.e. Bush;
- The US Justice system is fatally flawed in that it is now the corporation that effectively metes out justice;

The next thing this carnivorous, rancunous and ubiquitous excuse for a company will try and do is:

- outlaw open-source software under the veil of societal benefit;
- kill off, stifle or bleed dry, then acquire anything or anyone remotely competing with them.

Please consider renaming yourselves Department of Law On The Take, as there is no Justice in here. The US thinks it can rule the world, yet is toppled by an ugly billionaire that wrenches and worms its way through the worst

I for one will be closing the door on Microsoft in my company, the company I do contract work for and any firm I can convince on technical grounds that a change is feasible, as I also believe you guys are spying on us in Europe through that Redmondian Beast's software.

No more. Just Open Source and GPG, my data belongs to...me!

Yours sincerely
Dave Engbers
